

First ever convention appearance: Rosanna Arquette

Written by HOLLYWOOD SHOW

Wednesday, 29 April 2009 22:59 - Last Updated Monday, 22 June 2009 07:50

---

Rosanna Arquette - First signing convention ever.

Besides films, Arquette appeared from the beginning of her career in television films. In 1982, she earned an Emmy Award nomination for the TV film The Executioner's Song. Thereafter, she played in many cinema movies and TV films and has worked with many of the most acclaimed film directors of the last twenty years. Arquette's first starring role was in John Sayles's Baby It's You, a highly regarded but little seen film. She starred in Desperately Seeking Susan (1985) alongside pop singer Madonna. Following the commercial and critical failure of both After Hours and 8 Million Ways to Die, she quit Hollywood to work in Europe.

In 1989, Scorsese offered her a part in New York Stories. Since then, Arquette has appeared, with few exceptions, in one or in several movies each year, some of them of notable interest, like Pulp Fiction and the David Cronenberg film, Crash. In 1990, Arquette appeared on the cover and in a nude pictorial in Playboy's September issue,

First ever convention appearance: Rosanna Arquette

Written by HOLLYWOOD SHOW

Wednesday, 29 April 2009 22:59 - Last Updated Monday, 22 June 2009 07:50

